ENGIE is a member of the Global Compact

ENGIE joined the Global Compact when it was launched. The Group pursues the commitments of the Compact and has integrated them into its values and priorities concerning sustainability.

The Global Compact was set up in 2000 by the United Nations, following an initiative by its secretary general, inviting businesses to improve their social responsibility and take an active part in sustainability efforts. The Compact asks businesses to embrace, support and enact, within their sphere of influence, a set of 10 core principles in human rights, labor, environment and anti-corruption. In 2014, more than 12,000 members from 145 countries joined the Compact. Gérard Mestrallet, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of ENGIE, chaired the French Global Compact network until 2013. As of January 1, 2014, 1000 French companies and organizations have joined the Global Compact.

ENGIE enacts the ten principles of the UN Global Compact

Since 2010, ENGIE has released a progress report concerning these commitments. Information on the 21 criteria for joining the "Global Compact advanced" is listed on the Global Compact website.
