Statement by the Managing Director, Mr. Lars Moller

Referring to our Letter of Commitment to the UN Global Compact in May 2011, I am very pleased to herewith reconfirm that Ingemann Food Nicaragua supports the ten principles of the Global Compact with respect to human rights, labour, environment and anti-corruption.

Over the past 12 month period we have made progress on the implementation of the principles within our sphere of influence in the honey chain in Nicaragua and we will actively continue to do so for the period to come.

At Ingemann Food Nicaragua we are committed to aligning all our business operations and strategies with the ten universally accepted principles in the field of human rights, labour, environment and anti-corruption. Joining and contributing to UN Global Compact has given us the opportunity to effectively work out our vision as a business driving more fair and sustainable economic development in international food chains. We feel that our efforts are supported, shared and sustained by other businesses under the Global Compact. We believe that together we can make a change and transform current market arrangements into fair and sustainable trade.

The ten universally accepted principles of the UN Global Compact are the stepping stones in this transformation. As we learn from other business under the Global Compact, we sincerely hope that this COP serves to others as an experience worth analyzing and learning from.
