16th December, 2015

To our Stakeholders,

As Director of TrustWorks Global (TrustWorks) and Chief Executive Officer I, Josie Lianna Kaye, commit to continue to support the implementation of the principles of the UN Global Compact – both in terms of the essence of our mandate, and in terms of the way we work as a company.

This report is, therefore, TrustWorks's second Communications on Progress and covers the period of 2014-2015. It features TrustWorks' efforts to address the ten principles of the United Nations (UN) Global Compact on human rights, labour, environment and anti-corruption both in the workplace and more broadly within its sphere of influence.

TrustWorks supports businesses in natural resource-related sectors to operate in a socially, politically and environmentally responsible manner, by helping them to prevent and resolve conflicts with communities, governments and indigenous peoples. As such, our goals are fully aligned with those of the Global Compact. We strive to ensure that businesses, especially those operating in conflict-affected contexts, are able to minimize the negative and maximise the positive impacts of their operations by providing tailored analysis, training and mediation services – drawing upon our expertise in the fields of conflict sensitivity, conflict resolution, mediation, natural resource management, stakeholder engagement and strategic planning.

Nonetheless, like all the other companies who form part of the Global Compacts' vast network, we are also a learning organisation – continually looking to adapt and improve ourselves, both in terms of the services we offer to our clients, and how we operate as a company, as expressed in our principles, processes and working methods that make up what we stand for on a day-to-day basis. This report, therefore, provides a moment to reflect on what we have achieved since joining the Global Compact, and to identify areas where we can continue to improve in the months and years ahead.

We look forward to remaining a member of a community of businesses committed to the Global Compact's principles.

Yours sincerely,

Josie Lianna Kaye

TrustWorks' Disclosure on UN Global Compact Principles

1. Human Rights Principles

Principle 1: Businesses should support and respect the protection of internationally proclaimed human rights; and,

Principle 2: Make sure that they are not complicit in human right abuses

a. Assessment, Policy and Goals on Human Rights

Human Rights are at the core of TrustWorks's business philosophy. TrustWorks believes in the potential of the private sector to collaborate with governments and communities to achieve peace-building, state building and sustainable development goals that establish/re-establish the conditions for the enjoyment of social, political and economic rights, and therefore to actively contribute to an environment where human rights are respected and promoted.

TrustWorks is implicitly concerned with human rights in its core business operations. Within its sphere of external influence, the company focuses on addressing non-technical risks facing oil, gas and mining companies that operate in conflict-affected, fragile and developing contexts, and therefore helps ensure companies are in conformity with internationally proclaimed human rights principles.

Due to our mandate to help businesses improve their impact on communities, TrustWorks upholds a policy to not preclude any company accused of human rights violations from receiving our services and support on the basis of that accusation – as we feel these companies need our services in many ways more than others in order to rectify their operational practices.

However, when approached by a company, TrustWorks first fulfils a due diligence assessment of this company - all the more so if the company has been accused of violations. Once this initial due diligence screening completed, TrustWorks decides whether to work with such companies and to ensure that we do not become ourselves, complicit.

TrustWorks's due diligence assessment involves an honest evaluation of:

- The political will within the company to address these violations and commitment from senior managers that the initiative will be implemented;
- The access we will have to staff and stakeholders to help the company to address these violations;
- Whether we are able to help the company address the issue that may have given rise to accusation of human rights violations, while also putting in place mechanisms for the long-term that will enable stakeholders to seek redress; and,
- Whether our engagement can be reasonably expected not to cause harm to any persons or any contexts and if the security of TrustWorks personnel will not be jeopardised.

Internally,, TrustWorks only hires staff who have a proven track record in field related to our domain of business; we work with credible suppliers (web designers, accountants, lawyers etc.) who have been recommended to us by dis-interested third parties.

TrustWorks also partners with Swisspeace and the Conflict and Research Unit at Clingendael both of whom share a commitment to the principles enshrined by the Global Compact.

b. Implementation

TrustWorks has developed a comprehensive series of country profiles that analyse the various socio-political, economic and/or environmental risks faced by prospective clients in high-risk countries, and possible linkages between these dynamics and human rights abuses.

The country profiles form the basis upon which TrustWorks builds its outreach strategy, identifying salient issues in high-risk countries that can be mitigated through a careful selection of companies which may benefit from our services. TrustWorks's conflict management expertise allows us to bridge the gap between governments, communities and companies to help the latter minimise the negative and maximise the positive impact of their operations.

Accordingly, the selection of our clients is a particularly thorough process. When approached by a new client, we usually take 1-2 weeks to do our due diligence on the company and to complete our assessment of whether we are in a position to assist, or not.

Through our website, our very active twitter and LinkedIn account, we also contribute to raise awareness about the crucial role of Businesses in advancing Human Rights and conflict prevention. Through carefully selected articles and in-depths analyses, we communicate our views and opinions on how companies can improve the commitment to human rights due-diligence, and become a valuable partner for communities and states.

c. Measurement of Outcome

TrustWorks is positioned at the forefront of Human Rights protection and conflict mediation. The past year has seen the successful further development and establishment of the brand, as well as increased awareness.

TrustWorks has over a 1500 hits on its website in over 30 countries on every continent, and we have increased our followers on twitter to almost 700 in the course of the last year.

The company is known by major institutions including the UN, the OECD, EEAS, the EIB, the World Bank, USAID, the Center for Humanitarian Dialogue, Mercy Corps, Thales, TD-International and various NGOs, amongst others. Every member of the company is charged with engaging with our clients through a human rights lens.

Finally, the United Nations Peacemaker and UNEP also published a guide for mediation practitioners on Natural Resources and Conflict, co-authored by TrustWorks's Director. This guide builds on natural resources mediation practices of over 30 field experts, and builds in the Director's own expertise. This practical guide allows us to share knowledge and expertise with both the policy and business community valuable good-practices in the field of Human Rights and conflict mediation linked to natural resources and company operations.

2. Labour Principles

Principle 3: Businesses should uphold the freedom of association and the effective recognition of the right to collective bargaining;

Principle 4: the elimination of all forms of forced and compulsory labour;

Principle 5: the effective abolishing of child labour; and,

Principle 6: the elimination of discrimination in respect of employment and occupation

a. Assessment, Policy and Goals on Labour standards

Mutual respect, integrity and trust are key values of interaction among the people within the TrustWorks network.

The quality of TrustWorks's expertise draws upon internal inclusiveness, gathering individuals with diverse nationalities, cultures, thinking styles and expertise. The great diversity of the individuals helps foster the team's ability to work collaboratively on a broad set of expert topics to address clients' needs and to achieve personal and professional development aspirations.

TrustWorks pools and develops talents by providing six-month internship opportunities for students enrolled in Masters programmes who have keen interest in its sphere of operation. Interns are subjected to the same confidentiality agreement as TrustWorks' Senior Advisors, and they work directly with the Director and Business Consultants in executing their roles; interns are encouraged to offer their views on the business, based on the understanding that they have as much to contribute as they do to learn. Given that they are students, all interns are expected to communicate transparently about the constraints on their side, and to prioritise their studies if ever there is a conflict.

While internships are voluntary, TrustWorks does not believe in free labour and thus, maintains a policy to provide interns a small bonus upon successful and satisfactory completion of the internship where possible. Senior Advisors are remunerated in the contexts of projects only, and Business Development Consultants are remunerated on a commission basis.

Within its sphere of influence, TrustWorks is committed to boosting the reputation of companies operating in conflict affected/high risk contexts by helping them to develop conflict-sensitive employment policies that avoid any discrimination against minority groups or working conditions that fuel latent resentment.

b. Implementation

Transparency and confidentiality are at the core of TrustWorks's business principles.

Confidentiality is the highest quality engagement of the company towards its clients. All TrustWorks staff and partners are subject to comprehensive contracts and confidentiality agreements. All "Staff", regardless of their status within the company, are subject to the same rights and obligations outlined in those agreements.

Transparency is the core principle of TrustWorks's internal operations, and is central to staff relations. The Director at TrustWorks communicates transparently to all team members as and when required. All team members are regularly kept up-to-date through monthly updates sent by the Director. On this occasion, all members are invited to offer their comments and insights on current projects and further company developments. On a bilateral basis, calls are held with individual staff members on a regular basis, as well as upon specific requests. For projects involving several in-house experts, and external consultants, regular phone calls and/or in person meetings are held. Finally, all team members join for an annual staff meeting in New York, an event where ideas and projects are shared in order to strategize on the year ahead and share lessons learnt and good-practices.

Finally, in our work with Clients, we maintain a strong commitment to ensuring businesses do not discriminate and/or are not perceived to discriminate against any particular group. At the core of our engagement strategies with clients, we build in services that help companies with labour related disputes, both internally, and in their community relations. We are able to design collaborative processes that enable staff to jointly separate fact from perception when it comes to differential treatment, and to then co-design processes to deal with both in a fair, equitable and transparent manner.

c. Measurement of Outcome

TrustWorks is composed of a balanced and diverse team.

The company's staff, including interns, covers a wide range of different nationalities across Europe, Asia, Africa and Latin America and ensures a 50-50 male-female representation, while the average age of employees is 38.

TrustWorks is a woman-run business as the Director, a woman, is the only shareholder; however, the company does not discriminate in any way on the basis of gender or any other attributes.

At the current stage, the all-female composition of interns has been an opportunity for TrustWorks to empower young women to pursue their passion and to develop leadership in business, taking inspiration, support and precious mentoring from the Director.

However, it must be noted that this current all-female composition is not intentional and does not result from a discrimination policy against males. The internship recruitment process is based on an open, fair but highly competitive basis. Candidates are selected upon CV and letter of intent, then assessed through interview rounds. As for now, the most qualified candidates have proven to be women. Nevertheless, a male intern is set to start working for the company by beginning of next year. Finally, in autumn this year, the team grew by an additional member, a male senior expert on Human Rights.

3. Environmental Principles

Principle 7: Businesses should support precautionary approach to environmental challenges;

Principle 8: Undertake initiatives to promote greater environmental responsibility; and

Principle 9: Encourage the development and diffusion of environmentally friendly technologies.

a. Assessment, Policy and Goals on Environmental standards

TrustWorks believes that oil, gas and mining companies have a particularly important footprint in countries in or emerging from conflict and that environmental damage are more likely to provoke significant tensions between companies and communities as the communities most affected are often those whose livelihoods depend on land, water and other natural resources.

TrustWorks therefore supports companies to be socially and environmentally responsible by engendering an internal culture that genuinely reflects these principles. This way, companies can maintain their license to operate amongst communities, and can behave as “partners” rather than opposing sides in conflict. By building mutual beneficial relationships between companies and communities on environmental issues, it is easier to prevent environmental disasters, and to address them as and when they do arise, in a way that is efficient but also respectful of the local way of life.

b. Implementation

TrustWorks is engaged in environmental protection, both in its internal business values, and in its work with clients.

Environmental protection being one of our core services, the company actively engages with conflict and environmental concerns in its outreach strategy. Both our promotional materials and our social media feeds are tailored towards raising environmental awareness. TrustWorks, moreover, adapted the form to the content, having developed a 90 second animation that can be viewed on-line or on USBs keys distributed to interested potential clients and partners. We have also made our brochure accessible online to reduce the environmental impact of our outreach operations and processes.

As a company, our work requires significant travel, but when meetings or mentoring occasions can be held via video conferencing this option is often preferred in order to reduce our carbon footprint. We also minimize our printing: all of our promotional and outreach materials are available in electronic format..

c. Measurement of Outcome

By September 2015, TrustWorks reached out to over 50 oil, gas and mining companies to, among other reasons, reinforce their awareness of environmentally sustainable practices in their operations and to provide capacity-building and mediation services when required.

TrustWorks changed its outreach strategy from sending letters and outreach material, to sending emails in order to reduce our environmental footprint. Also, TrustWorks's promotional 90 seconds video fulfils the outreach purposes, while accompanying pdf-brochures allow to replace hard-copy ones.

This year, the majority of team and multilateral meetings held by TrustWorks were held via Skype or tele-conferencing to avoid unnecessary travel and carbon footprint.

Finally, TrustWorks also took part in discussions and conferences organised around the topic of environmental protection, especially in conflict contexts, and will continue to prioritise environmental protection in its engagements with clients.

4. Anti-corruption Principles

Principle 10: Businesses should work against corruption in all its forms, including extortion and bribery.

a. Assessment, Policy and Goals on anti-corruption

TrustWorks acknowledges that tax revenue from natural resource wealth provides governments in fragile contexts with the resources to be able to provide and improve basic service delivery. However, development objectives are often not achieved due to the failure to generate transparent and accountable processes, which in turn contributes to mass distrust for companies, greater income disparities, conflicts and ultimately constrain bottom line growth. TrustWorks seeks to work with companies to communicate effectively and transparently, thereby avoiding the negative optics and impacts of being associated with corrupt practices.

TrustWorks operates as an impartial, independent company which uses independent, impartial analysis; targeted, comprehensive capacity-building; and, inclusive mediation processes to build trust. However, we work actively and openly with companies wishing to address corruption, and welcome requests from clients wishing to address this problem in a proactive manner. As with issues of human rights violations, TrustWorks does its due diligence with companies who have been accused of corruption to be sure that we are in a position to assist.

Anti-corruption is one of the most important clauses in the contracts signed between the company and staff, and TrustWorks has an internal zero tolerance policy towards corruption.

b. Implementation

In the year ahead, TrustWorks intends to expand its work and engagement with companies working in conflict-affected and fragile states to help them address issues related to perceived and proven corruption.

In our work with clients, TrustWorks prioritizes transparent communication between operational staff and management, and encourages companies to implement processes and regular consultations which allow staff to report instances of corruption without fear of reprisal.

Internally, the company continuously reviews and updates its operational guidelines on anticorruption, and carefully carries out due diligence assessments in dealing with current and prospective clients.

c. Measurement of Outcome

In its work with clients, dealing with corruption accusations is a significant part of TrustWorks's mandate. The company carefully assesses every claim, and develops project and case-specific engagement strategies for the client to improve its record in a long-term, sustainable and proven way.

In the year ahead, the company plans to partner with existing anti-corruption initiatives driven by private sector entities to complement government efforts in fighting corruption in resource-rich developing and/or conflict-affected regions with its sector-specific expertise.

It is among TrustWorks' core objectives to actively engage with policy-makers and civil society to contribute to anti-corruption policy development in order to develop long-term benefits for both communities and governments. The strategies the company develops with clients contribute to raising anti-corruption standards, building investor confidence and, finally, promoting socioeconomic development and political stability.
