Dear Sir/Madam,

United Nations Global Compact – Communication on Engagement

On behalf of the University of Melbourne, I am delighted to confirm our continued commitment to the United Nations Global Compact (UNGC) in its mission to encourage sustainable organisational practices.

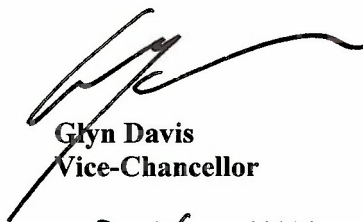

The University remains committed to embedding the UNGC's Ten Principles on human rights, labour, the environment and anti-corruption through its operations and core research, teaching and learning activities. The actions and initiatives taken in regard to these principles are outlined in our inaugural Sustainability Report, which the University hereby submits as its first Communication on Engagement.

This report covers the period of 1 January 2015 to 31 December 2015. The University will review its activities on an annual basis, and would welcome any feedback on this inaugural report.

The University will continue to participate in the activities of the UNGC through the Global Compact Network Australia and its varied platforms for dialogue and learning around sustainability best practice. As we implement sustainable practices at the University, we will share our knowledge and lend our expertise to tackling the social, environmental and ethical challenges facing Australia, the Asia Pacific region and the world.

We look forward to continuing to advance the principles of the UNGC across the University's activities.

Yours,

Glyn Davis
Vice-Chancellor
