Due to scarcity of clean drinking water in remote areas of Pakistan, Pak Oasis has taken the initiative of providing environmental friendly and cost effective solutions to the general public.

This is promised by incorporating industry-leading membrane filtration technology which ensures that all our water is safely purified, in accordance with both the respective national and international regulations.

PAK OASIS DECLARATION ON: HUMAN RIGHTS

ASSESSMENT, POLICY AND GOALS ON: HUMAN RIGHTS

Water sustains Life. Water is crucial for survival. Access to clean water is probably one, if not the most basic human right every individual should be entitled to.

Pak Oasis has always worked towards expanding the means necessary to allow each and every individual the right to access pure drinking water, irrespective of any human societal parameter.

Irrespective of all other contingencies, Pak Oasis transparently pledges to its Corporate Social Responsibility of working to provide clean water to each individual within its scope of influence.

Water in and of itself is the life sustaining component in its internal and external utilization for maintaining homogenous and balanced nutritional and hygienic state of living.

Pak Oasis ensures and currently maintains an ethically conscious and professionally sound environment that is insulated and free from any form of harassment, discrimination, disenfranchisement and discouragement of individuals that may belong to any race, religion, creed, color, orientation, gender, marital status, identity, origin, ancestry, genetically predisposition, citizenship, age or disability (medical or physical) wherein applicable by law to be employed to work, veteran and/or any other characteristic that is acceptable by local as well as international law.

IMPLEMENTATION ON: HUMAN RIGHTS

Pak Oasis transparently accepts and propagates the universal right of each and every individual human being and his or her entitlement to established human rights applicable to them. It also promises to uphold and value such right in any given context.

Pak Oasis considers the needs of marginalized communities. These communities have been unfortunately overlooked by social welfare and governmental institutions. To effect a change in their living condition, the first factor to consider is the reality that their source of clean drinking water is compromised.

Building upon its overall pledge to uphold human rights, Pak Oasis has provided (without charge) complete functional plants for social institutions such as jails, worship places, schools and local community centers in villages where the utility of clean drinking water is not available.

Pak Oasis has also taken the initiative to provide treatment plants to children's educational institutions and to minority communities.

When Children are insured protection from water borne diseases and pathogenic agents through access to clean water, they are able to maintain regularity in school and to progress in their self-development.

It is pertinent to note that as every human being has the right to religious freedom, maintaining that right is contingent upon the necessity of maintaining health and hygiene so that the individual is able to practice their faith in a socially as well as medical compliant manner.

Our solar panels also reduce dependency of many smaller communities on fuel powered generators which helps them to refocus and invest their energy, effort and resources for more constructive pursuits. It also reduces pollution through harmful fumes and other waste byproducts in the inhabited area. One of the primary methods of maintaining health and hygiene for the purpose of either educational resource utilization or that of religious/social commitment and communion is the access to and consumption/utilization of clean water. Hence providing clean drinking water caters to the fulfillment of all three human rights aspects that are crucial for a civil and progressively developing society.

Providing the necessary plants these social and correctional institutions, to filter and treat the water for consumption alleviates the cases of water borne infections and digestive ailments that could have been caused by contaminated water. The overall effect of this endeavor is that these institutions in turn can focus on their primary aims of providing either education, remediation, religious service or community development without having to compromise on their time and effort in obtaining clean drinking water; resource and time that is then well spent in building the society at large in their own unique and individual capacities.

MEASURABLE OUTCOME ON: HUMAN RIGHTS

The HRCP, a social rights movement organization that is recognized in Pakistan and the world over, has acknowledged the efforts that Pak Oasis has made in supplying clean drinking water to citizens living in the lowest income groups.
