COMMUNICATION OF ENGAGEMENT:

There is no doubt that corruption has eaten deep into the fabric of the Nigerian society. Successive governments in the country since independence in 1960 had in recognition of the evil of corruption established programmes and agencies to deal with it. These include the War Against Indiscipline and Corruption (WAIC); Independent Corrupt Practices and other Related Offences Commission (ICPC); the Economic and Financial Crimes Commission (EFCC); etc. Despite the establishment of these agencies and targeted programmes, corruption has continued to ruin every aspect of the country's national life with serious damages to her image before the international community. Corruption has not only become pervasive in Nigeria but it is more or less a way of life, much to the detriment of the Nigerian society and economy. In order to strengthen collaboration between CSOs and Anti-Graft agencies Hamada Community Development Foundation, being a member organization of Anglophone West Africa Integrity Group has written to the Zonal Commissioner of Independent Corrupt Practices and Other Related offences Commission requesting their approval to partner in the fight against corruption in the country.
