

Participatory Human Rights Advancement Society participated the survey as a member organization of World Health Organization's Department of Maternal, Newborn, Child and Adolescent Health (MCA) on Research prioritization setting process on social, behavioural and community engagement interventions (SBCE) for maternal, newborn and child health (MNCH) On 21 September 2015

Research Prioritization Process on Social, Behavioural and Community Engagement Interventions (SBCE) for maternal, newborn and child health (MNCH) conducted by the World Health Organization's Department of Maternal, Newborn, Child and Adolescent Health (MCA). Participate in this process to identify priorities specifically for research on child health. The three most important research needs on SBCE interventions for maternal health. Suggest three research needs in low- and middle-income countries that could be answered through research programmes of up to five years. Participatory Human Rights Advancement Society was invited to participate this survey as a member organization of World Health Organization Department of Maternal, Newborn, Child and Adolescent Health (MCA).