On the other hand, Malia Group enters in partnership with international Groups as a licensee, distributor, manufacturer, or other. Such Groups have their ethics and anti-corruption standards that they incorporate into contract, and with which we comply.

Ensure that internal procedures support the company's anti-corruption commitment

The Ten Principles of the UNGC are incorporated into our Code of Ethics. Whenever employees are newly recruited, they sign on the Code of Ethics and Internal Regulations.

We have as well systems implemented to ensure quality and transparency to eliminate corruption. For instance, it is by system that for purchasing matters, three or more quotations from different vendors are requested, and then audited by the procurement auditor, to ensure non-bias and eliminate the risk of corruption.

Additionally, the Audit function is present at all levels: an internal audit function audits the financials and procedures of the businesses. Said function reports to the Audit, Risk and Compliance Committee, constituted of the independent members of the Board of Directors; in addition, Deloitte audits the financials of the Group at standalone and consolidated level; a third audit happens where needed, for instance principals who audit our facilities.
