Dear colleagues,

Lecta is firmly committed to conducting its business in line with strict standards and sustainability criteria and, therefore, sets several specific goals for improvement every year that it publishes in its Environmental Report.

With the gradual return to normality in 2021 following the significant global impact of the pandemic, a special goal for improvement has been to recover the level of excellence in environmental performance that existed before COVID-19.

Like any other business, our Company was affected by the pandemic, and the drop in demand due to the lockdowns and restrictions led to inevitable downtime on some of the production lines in our factories, with the consequent loss in production efficiency. Even so, and despite the difficulties of the situation, Lecta was able to meet most of its environmental and social goals set for the last period.

In 2021, we continued to make every effort to preserve the health and safety of our employees, which is a priority in the situation we have faced, and to ensure our activity and the service we provide to our customers are maintained.

As a responsible company committed to society, Lecta shall continue to search for innovative solutions based on natural and renewable raw materials, which enables us to imagine new environmentally friendly, functional papers. To help create a better, more sustainable world for people and for the planet.

Along with all this, Lecta would once again like to express its desire to join the United Nations Global Compact and its commitment to fulfil the 10 principles regarding Human Rights, Labour, the Environment, and Anti-corruption.

Kind regards,
