Smart Observatory Application (Voice)

Overview

The idea of the project is to create an intelligent electronic application that will be accessible to everyone. People will be able to communicate with the organization through this application in just a few simple steps. In coordination with different organizations in different countries where human rights violations are rampant, the victim could file a report and explain her situation through the Smart Observatory Application (Voice).

Peace Without Limits (PWL) International Organization will coordinate the case to the partnered organizations or agencies where the case took place. The victim could also trace the step-by-step status of her case through the application. The specialized partner which should be a local organization will be the one that will determine the kind of support the victim needs. Most of the victims are afraid and hesitant to talk with someone foreigner even if they need immediate help. To solve this hindrance, local organizations with local social workers would have the key role in communicating with the victims through the Smart Observatory Application (Voice) to give the victim a sense of security. The local social worker would then know if the victim needs psychological, legal, or emotional assistance.

Nowadays, there are many people, especially young girls, who are exposed to abuse and violence. They are afraid to go to specialized agencies. But through the Smart Observatory Application (Voice), getting help will be reachable and simple with just a few taps on their devices. The victim would have the ability to communicate through smart applications or E-mail to seek advice or guidance – an advice that may help save a human life.

The project is not new, in fact there are many organizations that have the same idea for several years, but the difference is that PWL is targeting to hear the voices of different groups to achieve the principle of NO ONE LEFT BEHIND and at the same time, protect their right to privacy.

The project aims to help the victims of sexual harassment, victims of disasters, cases of bullying in schools, cases of racism; victims of violations in case of wars and other cases that have impediments to direct communication with the various human rights mechanisms in general.

The project started from an idea back in 2014-2015 and has now promptly taking shape.

Initially scheduled to be launched in 2018, the project commencement was deferred into a later date after the field visits and additional research and studies were conducted to provide the best possible form of service. The project completed the field stage of initial form after field visits to different regions such as the Middle East, North Africa, Southeast Asia, the Pacific and Africa.

Currently in the process of developing the required design, which will still go under several tests to achieve the desired product of the project, PWL is eyeing the launch in 2020 where the project will start in stages through PWL's regional offices and the first phase will be launched in the Middle East and North Africa region.

The organization has always been keen in all of its programs on the theory of innovation in human sciences and harnessing modern technologies and drawing the best practices and experiences in order to provide the best service in line with the SDGs.

Expected outcomes of the project

- Tracks violations
- Improves protections
