

UN Global Compact Communication on Progress 2022

Simon Carter, Chief Executive Officer, British Land

“British Land has been a signatory to the UN Global Compact since 2009. I am pleased to reaffirm our support for its principles on human rights, labour, environment and anti-corruption. We will continue to advance our approach in each of these important areas through our 2030 sustainability strategy.

This year we celebrate 20 years of sustainability reporting, and never has our environmental and social focus been more integral to the way we do business. The climate emergency is high on everyone’s agenda; we face a cost of living crisis and the impact of Covid-19 continues to reverberate throughout our communities. This means progressing our pathway to net zero and making a positive impact at our places is more important than ever. We have continued to deliver strong progress this year.

At 1 Triton Square, we completed our second net zero carbon development and we are now on site at Canada Water, where we are piloting some of the most innovative building materials and technologies to deliver market leading, highly sustainable buildings. Our approach is not only right in terms of the environment, but it also reflects what our customers increasingly expect. The strong business case for sustainable buildings was underlined this year by our leasing success at 1 Broadgate, which will be one of the most sustainable buildings in London and is fully let (or under option) four years ahead of completion. On the standing portfolio, we completed our net zero audits and are working with our customers to invest into the energy efficient interventions that programme has identified.

One outcome will be to raise EPC ratings across our portfolio to A or B by 2030 in line with expected MEES legislation. We were delighted that our efforts have again been recognised byGRESB, the Global Real Estate Sustainability Benchmark where we achieved a 5* rating for both developments and standing investments.

On the social side, our Place Based approach and our strong local relationships allow us to adapt to emerging needs and opportunities at each place to make the biggest impact. This year our community activities benefitted nearly 24,000 people. Our lasting collaboration with Capital City Partnership at Fort Kinnaird, where together we help people who face barriers move into employment, is a powerful example of that (see p23). This year marked ten years of our partnership with the National Literacy Trust. To celebrate, we commissioned research that quantified – for the first time – the economic benefits of reading for pleasure, estimated at £4.6bn pa within a generation. We are also successfully ramping up how we use our space to grow social value and differentiate our places, providing £2.9m in affordable space to community organisations such as the New Diorama Theatre at Broadgate, supporting the arts and encouraging people back to the capital post pandemic.

Against a challenging backdrop, our teams have done a fantastic job, working with our customers and partners to support local communities. I would like to thank them for all their hard work and for their huge contribution to making our places vibrant and successful. As we go into a new year, with new uncertainties, their dedication will be more vital than ever.”
