Energime Institute continues to engage students, workers, Governments, Institutions, and communities worldwide in efforts to educate, train, and develop projects that empower efforts to re-establish a sustainable balance to the use and preservation of their resources and the health of their environment. Through the lens of sustainable economic development. We have made a concerted effort on addressing food security/insecurity and are pursuing projects in Africa and in the US that focus on advanced aquaculture and food production education/training/project development in pursuit of that mission.

We continue to work on increasing our education/training resources that we make available to those who wish to avail themselves of those resources, and pursue partnerships which contribute to raising standards of living in areas of the world who are in need of assistance in achieving the goals laid out by the Sustainable Development Goals of the United Nations Compact.
