The 24-team tournament tipped off on Aug. 27 and runs through Sept. 14

EuroBasket 2025 tipped off on Wednesday as 24 teams and plenty of NBA stars compete to be crowned men's basketball champions of Europe. Games will be played in the four host countries of Cyprus, Finland, Poland and Latvia. The knockout stage, including the third-place and championship game will be held in Riga, Latvia in September. Defending champion Spain will try to defend its crown after beating France in final of the 2022 competition.

EuroBasket 2025 is not short on star power. Luka Dončić is suiting up for his home country of Slovenia, while three-time NBA MVP Nikola Jokić leads Serbia, the tournament favorites. Giannis Antetokounmpo is participating for Greece once again. A slew of other NBA players like Latvia's Kristaps Porziņģis, Franz Wagner -- who helped lead Germany to a bronze medal in 2022 -- and a promising young French trio of Zaccharie Risacher, Alexandre Sarr and Bilal Coulibaly are other names to watch. France's Victor Wembanyama, however, will not be competing in EuroBasket after his NBA season was cut short by a blood clot in February.
